

Routledge BOOK SERIES

Nordic Studies in a Global Context

About the Series

This new book series aims to open up more empirical, critical and reflective perspectives on the Nordic cultures, institutions, legal frameworks and “models” in a global and comparative context and to create a bridge between humanistic Nordic studies and the comparative and IR-oriented social sciences and law programmes. It looks to encourage methodologically driven and critical reflection on the nature, construction and use of Nordic traditions, models, institutions, laws, discourses and images.

The series welcomes submissions from a broad range of disciplines across the social sciences, law and humanities. Works can be located within a single discipline but should have some relevance beyond; contributions with a policy dimension are also welcome.

If you have an idea for a new book in Nordic Studies in a Global Context, please send a written proposal to the Series Editors:

Cathie Jo Martin Professor of Political Science at Boston University cjmartin@bu.edu

Malcolm Langford Professor of Public Law, University of Oslo malcolm.langford@jus.uio.no

Haldor Byrkjeflot Professor of Sociology, University of Oslo haldor.byrkjeflot@sosgeo.uio.no

For guidance on how to structure your proposal, please visit: www.routledge.com/our-customers/authors/publishing-guidelines

To date titles commissioned for the series include:

Byrkjeflot et al. eds The Making and Circulation of Nordic Models, Ideals and Images

Christensen et al. eds Nordic Criminal Justice in a Global Context: Practices and Promotion of Exceptionalism